Graunt me Lorde/by the merites of thy Passion/ and vertue of thy most excellent and glorious Diuinitie/vvhat soeuer thy vvise dome knovveth moste expedient to me/ vvhiche my miserable life is not vvorthy to obteine of thee.

At the houre of death/vvhen I shalbe accused afore thee for that death that thou suffredst for synners/haue mercy on me.

Breake my frovvard heart/and make it obedient to thee From sodain and vnforesene death/Lord/ preserue me.

Haue mercy also on the soules in purgatorie for thy bitter Passion / I beseche thee / & for thy glorious name / Jesu.

The holy Trinitie / one very God haue mercie on me.

Dominus noster Jesus Christ humiliauit semet ipsum pro nobis factus obediens vsque ad mortem. mortem autem Crucis.

Pater noster. Aue Maria. Credo.

Thus endeth this Psalter.

Unto such/as haue none opportunitie to saie the whole Psalter together / it is good that they saie the first v. petitions one daye / and the second v. another day/and the last v.another-day / & so in three dayes they shall say the whole. Psalter. but els if they may haue conuenient time: it is better to say the xv. principal petitions euery day/and ech of them x. times / vvith In nomine Jesu/ in the beginning. Pater no. Aue. & at euery fifty/ like as it is vvritē in the boke/vvith Domin⁹ noster. Pater noster. Aue maria. Credo.

¶ Here folovveth a holsome doctrine/hovve to resist & ouercome the ghostly tentations of the Fende.

Doctours

Doctours do vvrite/ that in spirituel tẽtatiõs we should behaue ouer selfe othervvyse/ than incarnal tẽtations. For carnal tentations vve ought to resist and vvrestle vvith them: but vve may not do so in spiritual tentations. Vvysely and discretely vve must resist them/ but in no vvise vvrestle vvith them: as thus: Vvhen the enemie putteth a motion of infidelitie/ reason not vvith him/ and likevvyse vvhen he casteh a suggestion of desperatiõ/ stryne not vvith him: but vse this medecine. Suspend your reason/ restraine all your senses/ & plucke vp all your spirites: as the motiõ cometh/ so let it passe/ vvithout strife. If it be only of the disposition of our corrupt nature/ this is sufficient/ if it be vsed. If it come of the enemie/he will not leaue so/but he will cleane otherwise/& worke more trouble. Than after the counsel of Doctours/vse this remedie: Dissimble and shew your self to set it at nought/though it be great: and lift vp your mynd to God/remembring his tender mercie in the redemption of man/and how it is his ordinannce/ with such tentatiõs and paines to proue his seruantes/to whom he entendeth to giue the crowne of glorie. But if the enemie be fierce and will not cease for this (as he is most subtill and crafty) than make your selfe to God/ and offre your selfe to suffre for his loue (and for the fruit of penance for your sinnes gladly and with thanks of heart/all paines/ that it shall please his grace to sẽde you. And with that call and crie vvith heart and vvorde on the holy name of Jesu x. times / or more or lesse / as your deuotiõ serueth/vvith some holy & svvete meditatiõ of reuerẽce to the same/as God shal put in your minde. This vertue of mekenes / & confession of the name of Jesu in heart and vvorde/the enemie may not abide. For although for a time he vvill pretẽde & sẽble as though he vvere not abashed for that ver tue & name/as the serpẽt of which scripture saith/that for atime she vvill stoppe her eares/& yet by the vvorde of the enchanter in cõclu: sion she is ouercome and taken: so certainly the enemie(that holy na me named)is ouercome/although he vvill not be knovvẽ but tõ time vvill make insurrection more fier: cely after that holy name spoken.

Then strongly pourseyde him with the same / and with mekēnes / and ye shall see / how he will flee: to the great confort of all them / that abide as true seruan-tes perseuerant in this theyr pro-pre / to their great triunph and vt ter confusion of the enemie.
This hath ben proued by experiē-
ce. A Narratiou.

A certaine person there was / which be the space of tow yeares & more was troubled with suche motiōs of ten times by awter & by lāde. He had motiōs to despe-ratiō / & to the most abhominable that may be / to destroy him selfe both by water / & other wise. And this said pson ceassed not but called to God daily / to streugth him / euer confessing him selfe his seruant / and the worshipper of the holy holy name of Jesu / committing him selfe only and wholy to the passion of christ & mercy of God. And sone after the said time he had comfort / and was illumined or lightened in his soule / how to answere the enemie: to his great comfort / & to the edifying of other and that was thus. It was giue to him by a light / that when soeuer such a motion came to his minde / he should take the motion for an occasion of remembrance to honour the passion of Christ / and his blessed Mother the glorious virgin Marie. And although that it came to his minde an hundred times in that daye / so oft to say: Adoramus te / Christe Jesu: and to the Mother of mercy / Aue Maria And thus the person was cleane deliuered from his great tentatiō and trouble: to the great encreafe of hope in his foule / to the vt= ter driuing away of the ene= mie: and to the glorie of God: to whom be all honour and prai= fe / world with= out end. Amen.
